According to a report there will be no more professional "boxing" contests. The attorney-general's department has handed out this decision at last. After the rider added to jury's verdict in the recent Pelkey trial, the decision of the attorney general at Edmonton comes as no surprise. The tragic ending of the last professional boxing contest made it apparent that the professional boxer had had his day in Alberta

In another column is printed an article on mixed farming. It may be taken for granted that the majority of our farmers are now fully convinced that mixed farming is the right thing. But unfortunately there are two things which, at present, prevent the average farmer from going into this line of farming. First, the price of all live stock has been considerably advanced in price, which has made it almost prohibitory to purchase cattle at the present time by the average farmer; and second, the majority of farmers are short of the necessary cash to purchase the live stock. There is no doubt, however, as the farmer gets the cash he will gradually put it into live stock. The last three or four years' experience in wholly growing grain has convinced him that he must do something besides growing nothing else but grain, if he going to make a success of farming. What the farmer needs to-day is cheap available money, and it may be assured that the majority of our farmers would readily go in for mixed farming. There is no part of Alberta better adapted for mixed farming than there is in this Cayley district. That has been proved over and over again, and our farmers are going to prove this again, gradually but surely, right on from now.

Much of the loss to crops, buildings and other improvements caused by railway fires in cultivated sections of the Prairie Provinces, could be often avoided if farmers would raise some non-combustible crop on a strip of land adjacent to the railway rights of way. Alfalfa is suggested in this connection, since this crop will not burn and a narrow strip would form a thoroughly sufficient fireguard. Where clover can be grown successfully, it will answer equally as well. The growing of potatoes, beets, or other root crops will serve the same purpose, where local market conditions will permit. This would also be a step in the much-to-be-desired direction of diversified farming.

A Milwaukee man laughed sixteen hours at a joke heard in a local vaudeville theatre, and is in such a nervous condition that he will probably die. Any person that laughs sixteen minutes over the ordinary vaudeville jest is lacking in respect for old age and should consult an alienist.

J. W. Martin, inspector of Dominion land agencies, was in Nanton last week and transferred Nanton sub-agency from W. Robertson to D. E. McLean. It is said that Robertson got too fresh during the recent Alberta provincial election. Another case of a too partisan officer holder running amuck "agin" the government. It is reported that Robertson was overheard to remark, "that he was proud to be a Grit," and that McLean is both proud and glad to be a Conservative, there you are. "You pays your money and takes your choice."

A special feature this year at the Calgary exhibition is two classes—embroidery and crochet work—for old ladies work. These are open to women over 60 years of age. Mrs. E. Linton of Parkland is among the contestants in these two classes.

Speaking of the record of the Liberal administration in Great Britain, the Albertan says, among other things, "This was followed by the limitation of the veto of the House of Lords, which had a remarkable influence not only upon the people of Great Britain, but upon the whole British empire and the whole world. It destroyed at one move the influence of the hereditary nobility, and declared to the world that Britain had declared that the end had come of the relics of the feudal system. It is the latest declaration of the power of the people against the classes."

And by a strange co-incidence it has been left to Premier Borden, the Canadian Conservative leader, to do for the grand old antiquated men of the Canadian senate what the British Liberal party has accomplished with the British House of Lords. Truly history repeats itself.

London Canadian Gazette:
Many of us who are Canadians feel, as Sir Edmund Walker said at the Royal Colonial Institute luncheon on Monday, that we are not so proud of being a Canadian today as we were two or three weeks ago. When Mr. Borden made his emergency offer of three Dreadnoughts we all experienced the relief of a self-respecting man who sees the chance of paying a long-standing debt of honor. The Senate has willed otherwise, but Mr. Borden is a man of determination and a man of his word, and having, as we believe, the Canadian people behind him, he will justify Sir Edmund Walker's forecast and carry out his purpose of paying for the Dreadnoughts with Canadian money, even if, owing to the action of the Senate, the payment is somewhat deferred.

There are too many of our citizens who go about talking poor business, poor prospects and hard times to make it healthy for the average property holder. The position they take is absolutely wrong and has a tendency to injure the town more than anything else. The business men of Cayley and the mixed farmers of the district have no kick coming, and if all would resolve to "boost" instead of "knock," conditions would improve to a great extent.
We are blessed with a rich soil in the surrounding district and we have an ideal location for a prosperous and growing town here.
Let us keep a stiff upper lip and all look on the bright side of things. The pessimist has never yet made a success of life.

Turkey Eggs

Being an account of a recent dialogue heard over the phone not a hundred miles from here: The telephone bell rang insistently in the house of a farmer near—. The farmer reluctantly broke off his conversation with a travelling demonstrator of the Commission of Conservation and went to answer it.
"Yes, yes, I see. Well, I don't know whether I can accommodate you or not. Everybody's after them. What's the least you could do with? They're worth 30 cents each."

"Nine? Well, I can let you have that many, but it will be the first of the week before I can promise them. All right."

The farmer turned to the demonstrator in an explanatory way:

"They pester the life out of me over those turkey eggs for setting I have only a few hen turkeys, but I could sell eggs from ten times as many if I only had them."

"Did I understand you to say you got 30 cents a piece for them?"

"Yes, and I can't begin to supply the demand."

"Why not keep more hen turkeys?" suggested the Conservation Commission man. "There's money in them at that price."

"I suppose there is," said the farmer, "but we can't be bothered with too many of them."

"But it's worth while bothering with them," said the demonstrator. "A turkey will lay 35 eggs a season, and at 30 cents each that means one bird will bring you $10.50 a year in eggs alone.
That is better than growing grain.
When a man discovers a money-maker like that he should go for it hard."

"I believe you are right," admitted the farmer. "I am going to think about raising more turkeys after this."

And when the demonstrator took his departure, the farmer mused softly to himself: "I can see the reason why that fellow is called an expert!"

To make cut flowers last, set them in a pail of water up to their neck over night.

A Romance With a Curious Climax.

Arvid clambered up through the trap leading from the music room, with his usual interminable feeling of disgust that always filled his soul when it came time to take his place beside the leader of the Odeon orchestra.

It hated it all, the endless procession of sidewalk comedians, serio-comics, sketch artists, trained dogs and all the other component parts of the vaudeville show.

He had come to America fresh from the conservatory, with visions of a concert tour that should make him famous. They told him that America was a land of money, that there people sat up nights to get the opportunity to hear some great artist.

Instead, he had discovered that only those harried by a skillful promoter stood any chance. He was glad to get an occasional engagement for some small concert, and even these were less and less frequent as the season went.

Then had come that awful time when, penniless and hungry, he faced the realization that he could never have for success. He had been told to go back home a failure, and he had to thank the gods for the opportunity to hear some great artist.

were on, he left his place and propped the stage in the back of gaining speech with her, but she always was dressed and out before the first note.

The week progressed through these repeated disappointments preyed upon him, and he grew more and more gloomy.

One night came all too soon when it was with an aching heart that he quipped her music to play her accompaniment.

She took the music and put it down to work. He had put in a new song to try the last night. It was a popular ballad, but that had just come out, chosen by contract, but with a slow melodic chorus. He had tried it over and over, and he had liked it then. Now the melody seemed to fill his heart, and he got all of his artistic soul into the interpretation of the chorus. The other musicians, as if by common impulse, lowered their instruments, and the waiting tones of the violin formed such a perfect accompaniment to the voice that as the strains swelled out the audience suddenly grew quiet.

The chorus was repeated, and the last of the words became quite new to the audience. The chorus was ended, and the singer looked so expectantly at the orchestra.

For in the pressure of death, a great outburst of applause swept down from the gallery. The orchestra, with a demonstration from the lower floor, three times played over the chorus.

The leader guided Arvid to his feet, and the audience broke into a roar. The sensation he had created. Three times he repeated the chorus, and the audience broke into a roar.

HONOR AMONG THEM.

Showing the Folly of Taking Too Much.

The captain who took all the money that was in the safe and started to ship the country. It was a dark night, and as he was leaving the door he met a man with a loaded revolver.

"Hello! What's the matter?" he cried, referring him of all the money.

"I am most unfortunate," cried the captain. "I was passing this night leaving and a man held me up and left me here to die, but, thank heaven, he overlooked one thing—he didn't take my watch, and I am glad of that, for it is a Swiss timepiece that cost me $500."

"Why don't you free yourself?" inquired the horseman, as he examined the things which held the man captive.

"I can't," roared the unfortunate fellow. "The things are tied in hard knots which I can't. I could not undo them in a hundred years."

"Are you sure?" asked the horseman. "Absolutely certain of it?"

"I am sure," said the horseman. "That being the case, I guess I'll take your watch!" And he did—Judge.

Baggage. Nat Goodwin was at the club with the horseman, and because of the center of an appreciative group. A cigar man offered the comedian a cigar, and he was a user of the product.

"With such a cigar, you understand," the promoter said, "I give you one of them you may bring the coupons to me and exchange them for a grand prize."

Nat sniffed the cigar, pinched it gently, and then he remarked, looking at the Englishman who did not join, "I see the point!" he exclaimed.

"Being an actor, you have to travel around the country a good deal, and a cigar man is so much more convenient to carry," Philadelphia replied.

THE SERVANT QUESTION.

How Friction Between Mistress and Man May Be Avoided.

Women apportion their servants because they do not trust them, and the fault is not with the mistress but with the maid, for women who are educated and mature should be clearer than boys in their dealings with women who are not educated and who, because of their antecedents and limited experience, are so immature that they are many years for their very children.

If the maid appears very mysterious, and if she is very ill of work out of that is possible and of paying her smallest wages, that she is not a good leader to take, if the mistress is sure that the maid will do as little work as she can and will "strife" for the maximum wages, what else can be but enemies, how else can they look at each other but with suspicion? Fancy having in your house not only a perfect stranger, but one who considers you to be her enemy, with the certain knowledge also that she is unfriendly to you, and yet that is the kind of thing that is going on every day and all day in "the best regulated families."

The practical knowledge of the maid to be done, an ability to convey that knowledge to servants, to observe without appearing to observe, to be firm without nagging and to show friendliness without familiarity—all these are the qualities that a mistress must have to give to her maid a sense of personal freedom and responsibility and a practical knowledge of the details of the work which will tend to dissipate the hostility engendered by years of misunderstanding.

FLOATING GARDENS.

They Have Them Anchored With Living Hedges in Mexico.

The imagination of man has always been impressed by floating islands. In ancient times the islands were regarded with superstitious reverence, and the romantic story of Belshazzar's Feast in the city of Babylon, and one of the many cases recorded in classical literature of vagrant islands.

BASEBALL MAKING

Materials and Methods Used in Building Up the Spheres.

ONLY ONE PROCESS BY HAND.

That is sewing on the covers, a task to which machines are not equal. The Yarns Are Wound by Machinery Because Hand Work is Too Slow.

There are a few fans who realize just how much work is required in the making of a regulation size baseball. The centers of baseballs are made of pure Farnham rubber in most cases, but the cork center ball, which has been patented, is an exception. The idea of the center piece of rubber, of course, is to give the ball resiliency. If a baseball was made without this center piece it would be "dead"—that is, it would not have the desired bounding qualities.

The rubber is made to order for the baseball factories. The next process in the making of a ball is the winding of a pure woolen yarn. There was a time when the yarn was wound around the ball by hand, but now it is done by machinery. The yarn is wound around the ball by hand, but now it is done by machinery.

Local News

No kick is coming in this district this year for the want of moisture.

A number of our citizens are taking in the sights at Calgary fair this week.

Roy Toles, who has been assisting his brother-in-law, L. Beaton, our genial butcher, for some time, left on Thursday for his home in Wallaceburg, Ont.

A game of baseball was played at Parkland on Saturday evening between Staveland and the Parkland teams. It was a well contested game, both teams showing good form, but Staveland were victorious by a score of 8 to 5.

A meeting of the farmers was held in Cayley on Saturday last to discuss the questions of time and a farmers' elevator. After considerable discussion of the matter it was decided not to build an elevator this year.

The date has been arranged for the postponed game of football between Cayley and High River. The contest will take place at High River on Friday, July 11th, and we expect our boys will give a good account of themselves.

Dominion day was very quietly observed in Cayley. Some of our citizens took advantage of the holiday to witness the lacrosse game between High River and Calgary at the former town. The Calgary boys were outmatched from the start and at the finish the score stood 14 to 6 in favor of High River.

Farmers who have lived in Southern Alberta for eight years, during which time some bumper crops have been harvested, say that never before at this time of year have prospects looked as good if the present prices of grain only hold out until the crop is sold there will be prosperity in the country this fall.

The special auditors of the Calgary city council books state that accounting at city hall was antiquated and unbusinesslike. They found a deficit of $532,000 in waterworks department, and the street railway system was not paying as well as expected. The auditors found serious irregularities and have a long list of recommended changes.

A farewell party was held at the home of Miss Iva Crawford on Wednesday of last week in honor of Miss Ash who is leaving for her home in Wales. About forty of her friends were present and all report a good time. Miss Ash has just closed a successful term as teacher at Braeside school where she was much esteemed by all her pupils. Her many friends wish her a pleasant voyage across the ocean.

On Wednesday evening next the new I.O.O.F. lodge will be instituted in Cayley, and it promises to start off with a good list of members. Already ten have signed their names as charter members of the new lodge, and several others have signified their intention of becoming members.

There is also a good showing for a strong branch of a Rebecca lodge in connection with the I.O.O.F. Some six of the ladies journeyed to High River last week and were initiated into the mysteries of the order and are now prepared to pass them on to their sisters who wish to become partakers of the secrets of the order.

Eloquent Plea for Mixed Farming

"If every farmer in Alberta would become a mixed farmer and stock raiser as rapidly as his means would permit, the days of cheap grain would soon disappear, the productiveness of our farms would increase, and the tillers of the soil in Alberta would be the most prosperous and contented people in Canada."

This paragraph from the Fort Saskatchewan Conservator states in a nut-shell the general opinion of the people of Alberta who have given consideration to the question of an adequate supply of mixed farming products for the home market. In no district is the movement for more cattle and hog raising, more dairying, and more poultry, more pronounced than the territory extending from Battleford to Vegreville, between the Battle and Saskatchewan rivers. Here there is an area 150 miles long and 50 miles wide which has barely been scratched when its possibilities as a mixed farming district are considered.

A prominent farmer stated that not one per cent. of its possibilities in this direction had been developed. There is no better grazing country in the world, the grasses being nutritive and supplying abundant feed the year round. Though the district is comparatively only sparsely settled, with an occasional village of four to six hundred people, there is not sufficient dairy products to meet the local demands. Butter is imported, and is not, according to report, of first-class quality.

To show the field there is for dairy products, it may be stated that in the Lloydminster creamery the output in May, 1913, was sixteen thousand seven hundred pounds, while in 1912, the same month, it was only six thousand pounds. Thirty years ago in many parts of this territory there were many ranches, but the coming of the homesteader and the settler caused many of these ranches to be broken up into sections or quarter-sections. The cattle then began to disappear, the settlers paying practically all their attention to feed growing. They have learned from experience, however, that uncertainty of season and long distance from market make wheat growing an uncertain industry on which to rely exclusively. They have also learned that the home market offers an unlimited demand for meat, butter and eggs and poultry, a great deal of which is now imported. They are, therefore, paying more attention to these mixed farming industries. Many farmers are paying increasing attention to hog-raising. Vegreville alone for the year ending May, 1913, having shipped 170 carloads of hogs. The shipments of cattle in the same time was about two hundred carloads.

In discussing this question, a prominent Alberta farmer made the following observation: "A few months ago a large commission firm purchased 75 carloads of eggs in a day, and yet did not have sufficient to supply their orders. Hundreds of thousands of good Alberta dollars are sent to eastern Canada and the United States each year. Oats at 20c, wheat at less than 50c, eggs selling at 20c to 30c a dozen, and poultry from 16c to 25c a pound, there must be a handsome margin of profit in a country particularly adapted for the economical raising of poultry. If the farmers of Alberta would each keep from 100 to 200 hens, the money now sent out of the province would remove anxiety, and want from many a home, and provide luxuries now considered out of the question. We should be supplying eggs and poultry in carloads to points outside of Alberta."

Save Your Money

WHAT a man earns is not as important as what he saves. An office boy making $6 a week, of which amount he saves $1, is actually earning more than the $25 a week man who saves nothing. The boy's business is paying a dividend; the man's is a failure.

No matter how small your salary may be, you make a serious mistake when you fail to save a part of it. When you get your next week's salary, make up your mind to deposit a certain percentage of it in the bank, where it will draw interest at the highest current rate.
